Clothesline Arts Festival

September 9, 2007 – SOLD OUT

20 tickets on sale for $5 (original price was $6.50)

Take the Red Line bus

The Clothesline Arts Festival is an annual arts and crafts festival, which also includes food and performances by local entertainers. It was held on the grounds outside the MAG, which was the group that put on the festival.

This event was part of Yellow Jacket Weekend. Students were encouraged to use the bussing system that was already available on campus. This event was co-sponsored with the Creative Arts Club.

Sum 41 Concert

September 24, 2007 – SOLD OUT

40 tickets on sale for $10 (original price was $12)

Bussing provided

The concert was held on the RIT campus. It was received well by the students who went. They would have liked more tickets to be on sale for the event. Making sure only the students who bought the tickets from the Common Market and not at RIT were the only ones using the bus was a slight problem.

This event was co-sponsored by UR Concerts.
